

The materials and artwork contained in the Tool Kit on this WebAware portal are provided free of charge and are copyright-cleared for use by Canadian libraries participating in the Web Awareness Canada (WAC) program. The following outlines the guidelines that apply to the use of the Tool Kit contents or the development of your own additional Web Awareness promotional materials, as well as printing information.

Using the existing Tool Kit materials

Please feel free to download, reprint and use any of the materials contained in the Tool Kit. Here are a few guidelines we'd appreciate you following:

- Do not insert new material or alter the content that is there, including the text, copyright statements, partnership logos or recognition, other than as described below.
- Do not alter the graphic design elements, including the mouse or parent/child icons.
- White space has been left on the poster and on the second-last panel of the pamphlet so that you can insert the name, address, Web site, or specific Web Awareness information for your branch/library/system/ organization, provided the existing content and artwork is not altered.
- You may also brand the fact sheets, checklists, and media resources by putting your branch/library/system/organization name, logo, etc. at the bottom of each, again providing the existing content and artwork are not altered.
- No corporate/sponsor logos, names, credit or recognition may appear on any materials related to the Web Awareness Canada program or its promotion that are targeted to, or intended for use by, children or youth.
- The mouse and parent/child icons must not be altered.
- Please do not alter the theme - Parenting the Net Generation.
